24.06.1960 - Forever

Happy Birthday

Dearest Shilu,

I miss you still is an understatement. I miss you a lot. After my father, you were my best friend, my well wisher and guide. I did so many unbelievable things because you gave me the confidence and you stood by me like a rock.

I have been steadily losing my self belief and keep wondering the purpose of my life. I am still trying to keep you and your memories alive since that is the only thing I can do.

Thanks a million for taking care of Abhijeet, Vidhi, Aarnav, Veer and lately Sonali.

Your watchful eyes must keep an eye on this organisation called FEI which we built brick by brick.

Loving you so much, your Pratap

When I said, "Mom, 4 dosas will be enough for me", you always brought me 5.

When I was out, you would call me once in an hour to check on me.

When there were 2 mangoes and we were 3, you said " I don't like mangoes".

When I slept with no blankets, you always woke me up with one.

When I was travelling, you would ensure I had everything I love to eat before I left and carry.

After a long day whenever I came back home, you would say, "Come and have dinner with me, because you were waiting for me".

Whenever I studied through the night, you were with me, with my glass of milk and never ever complaining about losing your sleep.

At times, I may have not liked you for what you did.

I must have got irritated by you.

I may have even spoken badly to you, but I am glad that you never stopped being my Mom and I being your son.

You never stopped loving me.

No one in this world can take your place...not even God.

I miss you a lot and dedicate this thank you note to you, something I never told you ever but wish I did.

Love you Forever - Abhijeet

The Backbone, the Pillar, the Rock; that's what you have been for our family. Life was shattered when you suddenly went away leaving us all lost. We knew the show must go on, but were clueless how we could run our ship without its captain. Today, when I look back, I understand how you were always there to look over, protect and support us throughout our growth. We are what we are cause of your hard work and unending prayers for daddy, Abhijeet and FEI. I have always wished I could have had some more time with you dear Mummy. Miss you so so much. -

Vidhi

I have always been very fortunate to be working with the best bosses.

Shailaja Madam was my third boss (MY FAVOURITE MADAM/MOTHER).

An excellent human being. Within few days of my joining, we became so close to each other. She was a good mentor and had a beautiful heart. She could read the minds of the people if he or she is happy or sad. She was a person full of life and could spread happiness always.

As soon as she reached office, she would call me to discuss the status of our working and plan about the future. The discussions would be both professional and personal.

A person who would love to celebrate all the festivals and would force us to participate in all the celebrations. She would buy clothes according to the festivals and would ask us to dress accordingly. A true MOTIVATOR.

For me she planned my birthday before she went for her last overseas travel, but I never knew that it will be her last planning for me. She left us on 9th September just a day before my birthday.

A day I would never forget till my last breath.

Even today I start my work only after seeking her blessings.

I WISH HER A VERY HAPPY BIRTHDAY AND WILL MISS HER FOREVER.

It said that the birthstone of June is pearl and as it is perceived "Pearl" symbolises purity and innocence. Shailaja Madam was the real representation of her birth stone. I had the opportunity to spend very little time with her but those moments which I spent with her were always so interactive. She was always so captivating and impressed everyone she met. Love you so much. Miss You.

Shailaja Madam....A Lady I know, but never met

I have not had the opportunity to meet Shailaja Madam, but I feel that I know her quite well. From all the stories that I have heard from people who have interacted with her, I could sense that she always created a relation with each of the employees, which was different from the typical employee-employer relation.

They always saw an elder sister, a mother or a friend in her.

One of her greatest legacies is when even now people remember, how she would carry out a particular task and do it accordingly.

I am sure she must be very happy and elated watching Abhijeet take over the mantle from Mr. Nair and showering her blessings from the lotus feet of the Lord...

International Nurses Day: 5 reasons why the world still remembers Florence Nightingale

Florence Nightingale, a British nurse and social reformer, is regarded as the founder of modern nursing. Revered as “The Lady with the Lamp”, she is credited with giving nursing a favourable reputation for tending to wounded soldiers at night.

Florence Nightingale was born on May 12, 1820. Every year, her birth anniversary is celebrated as International Nurses Day. She passed away on August 13, 1910, at the age of 90. The celebrated English statistician was awarded with the order of merit in 1907 and became the first woman to receive this honour.

She opened the first scientifically based nursing school, the Nightingale School of Nursing, in London. It was opened in 1860. These are the five reasons why the world still remembers the founder of modern nursing.

1. Lady with the Lamp. There is a reason why Florence Nightingale is fondly remembered as the 'Lady with the Lamp'.

In 1854, Florence Nightingale led a group of 38 officially sanctioned women and arrived at the Barrack Hospital, Scutari (now known as Uskudar in Istanbul) to treat the sick and wounded British troops during the Crimean war that was fought between 1853 and 1856.

In this war, the Russians were on the one side and the British, French, and Ottoman Turks on the other. Once she arrived at the hospital, she witnessed an overwhelming number of injured soldiers, many of whom had also contracted other infections. She used to tend to patients round-the-clock, often wandering the wards at night and caring out duties with a lamp in hand. It is because of this practice, she earned the title “Lady with the Lamp.” Florence Nightingale chose to pursue nursing at a young age, despite her parents' objections.

In the 1830's, nursing was considered a profession of low social status, who would earn petty wages. Nurses were also subjected to frequent alcohol abuse. When 16-year-old Nightingale announced that she felt "called" to become a nurse, her parents weren't thrilled. But their determined daughter's mind was made up and, in 1850, she finally started learning the skills. Three years later, Nightingale became the superintendent of a London-based women's hospital. Florence Nightingale refused to get married. She turned down multiple proposals, including one made by a cousin named Henry Nicholson. Florence Nightingale frequently wrote letters on behalf of dying or dead soldiers to their kins. Nightingale wrote to soldiers' families to tell them of their loved ones' deaths. In a letter sent in 1856, she wrote, "It is with very sincere sorrow that I am obliged to confirm the fears of the father of the Late Howell Evans about his poor son ... I have never in my life had so painful & unsatisfactory a letter to write." Florence Nightingale popularized pie chart.

Though the first true pie chart was drawn in 1801, 19 years before Nightingale was born, the concept was popularized under her and hence she is also regarded as great statistician.

Among the known pie chart used by her is called 'coxcomb'. She designed it with the help of William Farr—the British epidemiologist who is regarded as one of the founders of medical statistics. It highlights the number of unnecessary deaths during the Crimean War as a result of preventable infections. It has become Nightingale's most well-known statistical illustration.

History of Indian Rail

An interesting story of air conditioning on Indian Railways. The first Indian train to get an air-conditioned car, which started running from 1934 was the Frontier Mail. The air-conditioning system then was basic, unlike the thermostat controlled powerplants we see today. In those days, ice blocks were used, carried in sealed receptacles built beneath the car floor, which were replenished at several halts along the line. A battery-operated blower constantly blew air into these receptacles, and the cold air entered the insulated cars through vents. Though it was very basic and messy, the effect was very pleasant. It was luxury at its best then. Imagine today if huge ice blocks were pushed into the underfloor ice receptacles at every other stop, how intimidating it would be. The pictures here shows Ice supply for the air conditioning in First class coach of the Frontier Mail at Bayana Junction on 11.09.1942.
