Why Window Shades Of A Plane Are Kept Open During Landings or Take-Offs

While travelling on an aeroplane, there are certain rules and regulations to be followed by the passengers onboard. Many of these rules are based on security reasons.

The air hostesses and flight stewards explain all the rules that have to be followed in a plane, to the passengers. Some of the common instructions include the proper procedure to wear a life jacket, how to fasten the seatbelts, how to order food, and more. Another common instruction that is usually given by the cabin crew is the opening and closing of the window shades. Many times, the crew themselves come and open or close them. Has anyone ever wondered why it is important to open the shades during landing?

According to aviation experts, most of the accidents that occur on planes occur during landings or takeoffs. During this time, the crew wants the passengers to be aware if there is anything untoward happening during landing or takeoff. Sometimes there might be smoke coming out of the propeller or a bird might have hit the plane's wings. It is important at that time that passengers are able to see the situation and quickly inform the crew members. There have been many cases where passengers have informed and alerted the crew members, which has helped in avoiding major accidents.

Another major reason is that a lot can be seen from the window. Suppose the plane is landing and a fire breaks out. As soon as they reach the ground, the passengers have to be evacuated immediately. During such situations, passengers will be aware of everything and can quickly reach a safer spot. Apart from that, the opening of window shades also makes the passengers aware of the outside weather.

Another important instruction from the crew is to close the tray tables. This is because if there is a panic situation, the passengers can freely move, and there is no hindrance to their movement. Passengers can get hurt if the trays are opened or the seats are pushed back.

Pope Francis's

After getting all of Pope Francis's luggage loaded into the limo at the airport, (and he doesn't travel light), the driver noticed the Pope is still standing on the curb.

'Excuse me, Your Holiness,' says the driver, 'Could you please take your seat so we can leave?'

'Well, to tell you the truth,' says the Pope, 'they never let me drive at the Vatican, and I'd really like to drive today.'

'I'm sorry, Your Holiness, but I cannot let you do that.'

'I'd lose my job! What if something should happen?' protests the driver, wishing he'd never gone to work that morning.

'Who's going to tell?' asks the Pope with a smile.

Reluctantly, the driver gets into the back as the Pope climbs in behind the wheel.

The driver quickly regrets his decision when, after exiting the airport, the Pontiff floors it, accelerating the limo to 130 mph.

(Remember, the Pope is Argentinean, and Fangio the famous racer, was Argentinean.)

"Please slow down, Your Holiness," pleads the worried driver, but the Pope keeps the pedal to the metal until they hear sirens.

"Oh, dear God, I'm going to lose my license -- and my job!", moans the driver.

The Pope pulls over and rolls down the window as the cop approaches; but the cop takes one look at him, goes back to his motorcycle, and gets on the radio.
'I need to talk to the Chief,' he says to the dispatcher.

The Chief gets on the radio and the cop tells him that he's stopped a limo going 130 mph.

'So bust him,' says the Chief.

'I don't think we want to do that. He's really important,' said the cop.

The Chief exclaimed, 'All the more reason!'

'No, I mean really important,' said the cop with a bit of persistence.

The Chief then asked, 'Who do you have there, the mayor?'

Cop: 'Bigger.'

Chief: 'A senator?'

Cop: 'Bigger.'

Chief: 'The President?'

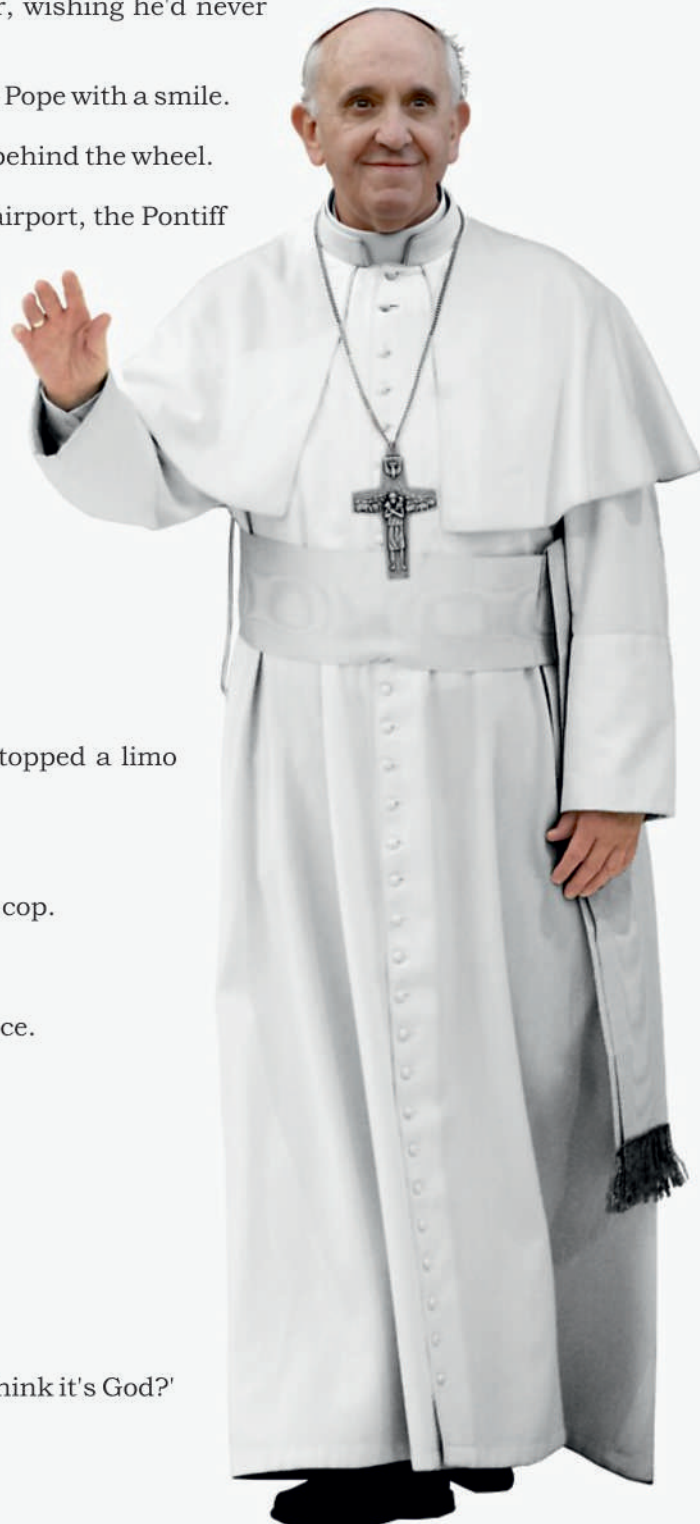

Cop: 'Bigger.'

'Well,' said the Chief, 'who is it?'

Cop: 'I think it's GOD!'

The Chief is even more puzzled and curious, 'What makes you think it's God?'

Cop: 'His chauffeur is the Pope!'

UNFOLDING THE ROSE

*It is only a tiny rosebud,
A flower of God's design;*

*But I cannot unfold the petals
With these clumsy hands of mine.*

The secret of unfolding flowers is not known to such as I.

*GOD opens this flower so sweetly,
When in my hands they fade and die.*

*If I cannot unfold a rosebud,
This flower of God's design,
Then how can I think I have wisdom
To unfold this life of mine?*

*So I'll trust in Him for His leading
Each moment of every day.*

*I will look to Him for His guidance
Each step of the pilgrim way.*

*The pathway that lies before me,
Only my Heavenly Father knows.*

*I'll trust Him to unfold the moments,
Just as He unfolds the rose.*

WHY DO COMPETITORS OPEN THEIR STORE NEXT TO ONE ANOTHER?

Have you ever wondered why two cafes or petrol stations are often right next to each other, but then there's none for miles?

At first, this might seem odd. Wouldn't a shop get more customers if it's far from its competitor? The answer to this puzzle can be found in something called Game Theory, particularly a concept known as the Nash Equilibrium.

To explain this idea, let's imagine a situation. There are two ice cream sellers, Seller A and Seller B, on a one-kilometer long beach. They both want to sell as much ice cream as possible. On day one, they set up their stalls halfway down the beach, with Seller A on one side and Seller B on the other. This way, each of them gets about half the beach-goers. It's a fair split.

However, Seller B wants more. So, on the second day, he moves his stall to the middle of the beach. Now, he gets more customers - about 62.5%, leaving Seller A with only 37.5%.

Seeing this, Seller A also moves to the middle of the beach on the third day. Now, they're both back to splitting the customers 50/50. Neither can move without losing customers to the other. This situation is called a Nash Equilibrium in Game Theory, named after the mathematician John Nash.

In simple terms, a Nash Equilibrium is a situation where no one can benefit by changing only their own strategy; if any changes are to be made, they have to be done by all the players. In our beach example, both ice cream sellers are now stuck in the middle, because moving away would mean fewer customers.

This theory isn't just about ice cream sellers, though. It's the reason why real shops, restaurants, and petrol stations often set up next to their competitors. Being near competitors means more potential customers are around, and moving away could mean missing out on these customers.

So, it may seem strange, but setting up a shop right next to a competitor can be a smart move. The next time you see two competing shops side by side, remember it's not just a coincidence. They're following a principle from Game Theory - the Nash Equilibrium. It's all part of the game of business, where sometimes, the best move is to stick close to your competition.
